Immigration

A business visa or work permit may be required for your trip

What you need to know

- For more clarity, please reach out to Global Mobility Team.

Please Note

The travel duration on business visa is restricted and cannot exceed 28 days (less than 28 days for few Countries). Do refer to the business visa policy for the duration of travel permitted before you plan your travel.

Posted Workers Directive

No PWD notification to be filed

What you need to know

- No further action required.

Please Note

The Posted Workers Directive is a European Union Directive aimed at protecting the rights and working conditions of posted employees, as well as stopping the circumvention of the rules and social dumping. The Directive creates a registration requirement in the EEA and Switzerland region and the assessment of this registration is made on a trip by trip basis taking into account the traveler's nationality, purpose of travel, destination Country/Jurisdiction/Territory, employer base and duration of the trip.

Social Security

No host country social security obligations

What you need to know

- A Certificate of Coverage (or A1 for EEA locations, UK and Switzerland) is needed to be filed

Please Note
No social security due on the basis that a social security agreement exists between the home and host locations. A Certificate of Coverage (or A1 for EEA locations, UK and Switzerland) needs to be obtained by your employer.

Tax

(01 Jan 2026 To 31 Dec 2026)

Not taxable

What you need to know

- Unlikely to be taxable.
- No employee withholding tax expected.

Please Note
The result is based on the information provided in this assessment as well as your employer's business rules and application of local tax laws. You may wish to consider if you have any wider tax reporting obligations as a result of this trip or other ties to the location. Similarly, there is unlikely to be employer withholding tax in the destination country on employment income relating to workdays on this trip.

Posted Worker Directive: If there is a PWD assessment above then:
The Posted Workers Directive ("PWD") analysis presented to you is based upon the interpretation of the relevant legislation as currently coded into the PWD Evaluation Engine together with client specific requirements that may override PWD notification requirements. In addition, PWD legislation is subject to change at a government's discretion and/or may not be clear in its actual requirements upon implementation. Therefore, any notification related decision may vary from a strict interpretation of the actual legislation at this point in time.

Where Deloitte will undertake a notification in respect of this travel, it is dependent upon the receipt of complete/accurate information and any required finalised documentation within the agreed timescales and availability of third party authority sites. Accordingly, no entity in the Deloitte Touch Tohmatsu Limited network of member firms or their affiliates makes any guarantee of a successful notification. Where a notification is completed and documentation made available it is the traveler's responsibility to (i) carry the relevant evidence provided to them in the event of a challenge by an authority at the time of travel and (ii) retain records in case of audit by the relevant authority in the future. If you have any questions regarding PWD requirements please consult with your employer.
